

Public Lecture

Gender Inequalities in the Labor Market

Speaker: Prof. Dr. Miriam Beblo
(Universität Hamburg)

Wednesday, 15 May 2019, 16:00 – 18:00

School of Business and Economics,
HS 105, Garystr. 21, 14195 Berlin

Despite a myriad of policies to promote women's opportunities in the labor market, the gender pay gap has been stagnant in many industrialized countries since the 1990s. This poses new challenges for labor economists:

- How can economists shed light on persistent gender inequalities?
- Which role do behavior and preferences play?
- What can we learn from experiments?

The event is open to the public.

This lecture is part of the Mini Class on Gender Economics of the doctoral program "Public Economics and Inequality" at Freie Universität Berlin. For further information, please contact Theresa Neef (theresa.neef@fu-berlin.de).
